Gregory N. Novalis

Gregory Novalis joined the ECS team as Editor-in-Chief in 2007 with an extensive background as a writer and editor in both the business and academic worlds. He has since assisted hundreds of ECS clients in preparing export compliance manuals, Technology Control Plans, Commodity Jurisdiction requests, employee training presentations, risk assessments, policy statements, process descriptions, forms, flowcharts, and other essential documents for their corporate compliance programs.

In addition to his freelance writing and editorial experience, ranging from creating web pages and press releases to editing novels, memoirs, and doctoral dissertations, Gregory has worked overseas as an ESL teacher, translator, and conference organizer in French-speaking Africa.

With a degree in philosophy and classics, and graduate work in theology, he also tutors high school and college students in math, English, and classical languages part time.
